

A friend is an illusion.

Somebody who sees you differently from yourself.

Somebody who seems to understand and listen best only after putting you in her very position.

Somebody there to give frustration in your interactions.

When you see how blind they are to your yearnings.

Somebody keeps showing how foolish you've made yourself in giving her all your heart and demanding a little empathy in return.

A friend is a misunderstanding.

Somebody who gives you concerns when they don't really mean to help.

Somebody to give you a bang on the face when you need their help.

Somebody whom the more you know, the more uncaring, insensitive you discover, they actually are.

A friend is somebody who needs you for their self-fulfilling prophecies.

A friend is there to give you lessons.

My dear friends, strong unfailing giants.

With hearts of iron.

They let me know what a ridiculous situation I am in.

My friends

They let me know.

My being here is a joke.

My life is a joke.